

Improving Expat Effectiveness

Building bridges across business cultures

Does your company operate a team in the Netherlands composed of local Dutch and international professionals, managers or Board members? Or maybe you are an expatriate working for a Dutch company, hospital or university trying to get a grip on Dutch business cultures and etiquette?

Let us help you and your business team to become highly effective by building bridges across different business cultures with our:

- Individual expat coaching sessions
- International team building workshops

We operate a team of qualified international coaches who are highly trained professionals. Some are Dutch businessmen and women who worked globally for large Dutch corporations, like Shell. Others are Business coaches with a specialization in intercultural management.

We invite you to call us for a free consultation: 06-46752088.

Daniel Le Gras, MA
Peter Lincklaen Arriëns, MA
Partners and International business coaches partner of the expatcenter

amsterdam

How we improve Expat effectiveness

Research shows that the main obstacle to expat effectiveness in a business team is the difference in business cultures.

To bridge the gap between different business cultures, all team members need to develop intercultural competencies.

To facilitate this process we have designed a coaching model, the International Team Builder®.

This highly effective tool will enable all team members to become aware of their own and other's business cultures. And how to build bridges between these (inter)national cultures.

For individual expats this coaching model is also a fast and easy way to get a grip on Dutch business cultures and to feel at home in the Netherlands.

